Secretary Bristow Demands Investigation.

ST LOUIS, Nov 27.—The following telegram, which speaks for itself, was received here this afternoon:

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27, 1875.

D. P. Dyer, U. S. District Attorney, St Louis:—I learn from the morning papers that in the course of the trial of Wm A Avery yesterday a witness stated a rumor that I was interested in a [illegible] house at Louisville, Kentucky, [illegible] the same rumor was circulated in St Louis by corrupt officials and guilty [illegible], their confederates and friends, [illegible] obviously for the purpose of breaking the force of the proceedings against them. So far as the matter rested in a mere street rumor or the columns of newspapers friendly to the ring, I could not properly take notice of it; but now that it has been dragged into court, as appears at the instance of the indicted officials, I deem it my duty to request that every person whose name has or can be given you, as having knowledge of the alleged facts, shall be brought before the grand jury and subjected to the most rigid examination. The statement is absolutely and unqualifiedly false so far as it affects me; but I do not desire to allow the matter to rest upon a mere denial. I [illegible] repeat the request heretofore communicated to you that those frauds on the government be probed to the very bottom, that every ramification of the ring shall be followed in every part from beginning to end, and that no one having connection with, or guilty knowledge of its operations shall be permitted to escape. So far as this department is concerned, I ask that every allegation against any officer of it, from its head to its lowest employe, be thoroughly investigated and vigorously prosecuted if any ground exists therefor. [illegible] to the President, who repeats his [illegible]: "Let no guilty man escape."

NEW YORK, Nov 26.—After prayer meeting at Plymouth Church this evening a business meeting was held, during which there was a discussion in the case of Deacon West. A letter from him was read in which he says he cannot conscientiously [illegible] until an impartial investigation of the charges against the pastor be made. In conclusion he says: "I now request you to unite with me in calling a mutual council, to consider the question in my case, and to decide whether dropping my name under the circumstances was just and in accordance with the polity of the Congregational churches. I hope you will unite with me in calling a mutual council, but in case I do not hear from you soon in answer to this request, I hereby give notice that I shall [illegible] an ex parte council in accordance with the usage of the denomination to vindicate my rights as a member of the church of Christ." WASHINGTON CITY.

The Fall of the Ax.

CHICAGO, Nov 27.—A Washington special says the political ax will fall in the Interior Department to-day. A great number of removals will be made for cause. In the Indian bureau alone about 20 clerks will be dismissed. This embraces all whom it is said investigations have led Secretary Chandler to suspect have any connection with things of any sort. There will be many removals in all other bureaus.

Secretary Chandler does not Pay Lobbying Bills.

Secretary Chandler yesterday struck out from the bill of [illegible] for [illegible] the Indian [illegible] an item making a charge for legislative expenses. In [illegible] this he [illegible] that such services [illegible] and that they would not hereafter be allowed. Hitherto large allowances have been made [illegible] for such services.

The Cuban Scare.

The Cuban scare has ended. Naval preparations continue. Several officers [illegible] orders to-day. Congressmen say within two weeks they intend to know what it all means. There has been a strong effort on the part of several Congressmen to fathom the mystery hanging over Secretary Robeson's [illegible] preparations. The conclusion reached by some of them is that the President has decided to recommend to Congress the immediate recognition of Cuban belligerents. Cuban representatives here [illegible] this course as a necessary party move, [illegible] as they argue if the President does not do this the Democrats of the House will immediately propose and pass resolutions of recognition. Whatever these preparations may mean, they still continue. In addition to fitting out going vessels of the navy, all receiving ships are performing active duty. Certain army officers seem to feel confident that at the end of the present movement is to be interference in Cuba, and they bring comparisons of views [illegible] will take to withdraw the cavalry and artillery forces from the [illegible] and replace them with volunteers whom it would be necessary to enlist to take care of the Indians. If the military will stand by you stop rations until the surrender is made."

"A Clean Sweep."

Just before the close of business this afternoon in the Interior Department, Secretary Chandler signed formal notifications to the chief clerks, three heads of divisions and seven other principal clerks of the bureau of Indian affairs that their services from this date will be dispensed with. The removals are based upon the recommendation of Commissioner Smith, and make a clean sweep of all clerks associated for any considerable time with the past history of the bureau. The desire, as the secretary and commissioner express it, is to begin anew. Commissioner Smith signifies his confidence in the [illegible] integrity of Chief Clerk Clum by [illegible] him for transfer to some other position in the department. The notices of removal reached most of the officials after the clerks interested had left for the day, and in these instances were [illegible] to their homes. Their successors are not yet appointed.

Demonstrations of Respect and Regard for the Distinguished Dead.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE OREGONIAN.]

The Obsequies at Baltimore.

BALTIMORE, Nov 26.—The line of march taken by the procession on receiving the remains of the Vice President [illegible] a mile and a half, was lined with spectators who defied the drenching rain. At the City Hall and vicinity fully [illegible] persons awaited the procession. On its arrival, a little after [illegible] o'clock, the escort was drawn in line facing west to the City Hall. The hearse then moved forward [illegible] at the east entrance, the regiments standing at present arms, the band playing the Dead March in Saul. The casket was borne from the hearse and placed on a bier in the rotunda, which was [illegible] draped in mourning, festooned with white lace and [illegible], as were the halls and doorways leading to the rotunda. The [illegible] with the remains were received by Mayor [illegible] in the Mayor's reception room, assisted by ex-Mayor George W. Banks and Wm. Brown, present Chief Judge of City Courts, Mayor Robt [illegible], ex-Mayor Joshua Van Sant. The casket was [illegible] with crosses and bouquets of camelias, calla lillies, [illegible] immortelles and other flowers, the tributes of admirers and friends of the distinguished deceased. The doors were then thrown open and a vast crowd passed through the rotunda for an hour and a half, taking a last look at the features so long familiar to the public. At [illegible] o'clock the casket was closed, the line of march again formed, the body removed to the hearse, and the procession marched to Calvert street depot, where the remains were placed on the train which left for Philadelphia at [illegible]. During the ceremonies in the city bells were tolled, and there was every demonstration of respect to the deceased.

At Philadelphia—The Remains on Exhibition at Independence Hall.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov 26.—The council committee with the Mayor left this city at 8 o'clock this evening by special car for Wilmington to meet the Massachusetts committee having charge of Wilson's remains. The train containing the body arrived at Wilmington at 9 [illegible] P. M., and the car with the body and Washington delegation was detached and connected with a special train which sped on to this city ahead of regular time, arriving at 11 [illegible] P. M. Mr King, chairman of the Philadelphia committee, made a few remarks extending the hospitalities, which were responded to by Col Wyman. On the arrival there was a large crowd in waiting at the depot. Gen Bankson and staff and Gen Meade were present. The procession formed, consisting of the committee and the [illegible] Regiment, Col [illegible], and the remains were transferred to an open hearse drawn by six horses and were removed to Independence Hall, arriving there at 12 [illegible] P. M. There was another large crowd here. At 12 o'clock the upper half of the lid of the casket was removed, and up to 2 A. M. the public were admitted to view the body. A detachment of the [illegible] regiment are on guard in the hall. The body lies in the room in which the Declaration of Independence was signed. The body lies on a low catafalque in the center of the hall, under a canopy of the American colors trimmed with black. On the casket are flowers formed into various designs. At the head of the casket are beautifully arranged many floral offerings, gifts of our citizens, consisting of broken columns, crowns, harps, etc. The room is beautifully draped.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov 27.—The doors of Independence Hall were reopened at 7 o'clock this forenoon, and from that hour until 10 two continuous double lines of people viewed the remains of the late Vice President Wilson. A great number of persons were unable to gain admittance to the hall. At a quarter of 11 o'clock the body was removed to the hearse, which was drawn by ten beautiful black horses, and at precisely 11 o'clock the funeral cortege started. The route was out Walnut to Broad street, thence to Germantown Junction, where a special train was in waiting. All along the route the streets were crowded. Many places of business were closed, and others made beautiful exhibitions of mourning emblems. The State House bell was tolled, and the Dead March and other dirges performed by the bells of St. Stephen's church. The procession was very impressive. It included Gov. Hartranft, Major Banks and staff, first division National Guards, committee in charge of the remains, mayor, members of congress and pall bearers, committee of arrangements, members of the council and heads of departments, numbers [illegible], League delegations of Patriotic Order of Sons of America, Philadelphia Union club.

Immense Procession, Military and Civic, at New York.

NEW YORK, Nov 27.—Contrary to the experience of Washington and Baltimore, this city is favored to-day with delightful weather for the obsequies of the Vice President. Broadway is thronged with people and the military have taken position, but the remains have not yet arrived at the appointed time (1 P. M.). There was some delay in starting from Philadelphia.

NEW YORK, Nov 27.—With becoming solemnity, reverence and earnestness New York to-day paid her tribute to the remains and memory of Vice President Wilson. The flower of our military, delegations from our financial and commercial institutions, the city government, prominent citizens, as well as the lowly of the colored population, all united in showing respect for the distinguished dead. Long before the hour at which the special train bearing the remains was expected at Jersey City great crowds congregated there, and around the depot soon was taken every available position in which a view of the proceedings might be obtained. The passage way leading into the ferry house was tastefully draped, and on the national flag was the following inscription: "Henry Wilson, born Feb 16, 1812; died Nov 22d, 1875." Beneath this were the lines: "O Death, the all eloquent! You only prove what dust we dote on when 'tis man we love." The Chief of Police of Jersey City was here with one hundred officers to [illegible] the [illegible] white and colored troops of the National Guard, all of whom were to accompany the remains to New York. Shortly before [illegible] o'clock the committee of the common council of this city and heads of departments filed into the depot and took positions. At five minutes after 1 o'clock the train moved slowly into the depot. The locomotive and cars were neatly draped. The hearse, drawn by four horses, now approached the train and the body borne to it, the military presenting arms, bands playing dirges, and the numerous crowd all baring their heads. A procession was promptly formed and moved to the ferryboat, all bells of the city tolling until the artillery corps posted in the neighborhood [illegible]. The only member of Congress who accompanied the remains to this city was Senator Boutwell, who was joined at Jersey City by Senators Cragin of New Hampshire and Paddock of Nebraska. A delegation from the Massachusetts Republican Association of Washington also accompanied the remains. The steamer having arrived at Courtland street, the [illegible] place without delay. The several committees having taken their assigned place, the cortege began its march through New York. The [illegible] regiment of [illegible] and Sumner Guards (colored) formed a guard of honor. Five regiments of infantry, three of mounted troops, officers of regular army, 800 policemen, a battalion of the fire department with apparatus, numerous committees from political and other civic bodies, also officers of the National, State and municipal governments, composed the procession. As the cortege passed up Courtland street an immense crowd of spectators lined the sidewalks. Broadway was thronged [illegible] Fifth avenue and Madison avenue to the depot, and not only were the streets filled but every window [illegible] be had was occupied. On arriving at the depot the body was carried [illegible] and the escort dismissed, a detail only having been made to keep guard until [illegible] o'clock, when the train started for Boston. The weather was delightful, but unfortunately it was [illegible] before much progress was made in the [illegible] great part was accomplished in [illegible] the evening. Fred Douglass occupied a [illegible] with Senators Boutwell, Cragin and Paddock.

On the platform were the council, heads of departments, Gov Gaston, ex-Govs Banks and Gardner, Judge [illegible] and Charles Francis Adams. As soon as called to order prayer was offered by Ed. E. Arrival of the Cortege in Boston.

BOSTON, Nov 28.—More than the Sabbath stillness seemed to brood over the city as morning broke bright and beautiful, and an added solemnity [illegible] the sad occasion ushered in the day and imparted its influences to the thousands assembling to witness the opening of the last sad rites about being paid by the bereaved commonwealth to its late distinguished son. It was expected that a special train bearing the remains of the Vice President would arrive at the depot of the Boston and Albany railroad at 9.30 A. M. Long before that hour the crowd waiting might be numbered by thousands. A detail of 40 police and 8 mounted men kept order in the depot and Lincoln street, leading from the Beach street entrance, allowing no one to pass in or out but those forming the escort, guard of honor and the various deputed companies. At 9 o'clock A. M., Col J. K. Baker of the Governor's council, Colonels Wilder and [illegible] of the governor's staff, Mayor Cobb, Aldermen Clark and Stebbins, President Boardman of the common council, and Councilmen Brackett, Flynn and Wilson took carriages from the State house to the depot. Here the first corps of cadets, 150 muskets, under command of Lt Col Edmunds, were in waiting, drawn up in line on Lincoln street. As the 10.10 A. M. train moved into the depot, eight policemen, dressed in uniform, detailed for the purpose, bore the casket from the train to the Beach street entrance, Captain Haycock with a detachment of twelve marines who had accompanied the remains from Washington, with the officers of the Fifth Maryland regiment, marching on either side of the casket as a guard of honor. As the body was being borne through the depot a member of the brigade band played a [illegible] dirge on the cornet, this being the only music at the depot or on the line of march. The casket was placed in the hearse in waiting, the cadets presenting arms as the cortege emerged from the depot. The ceremony of bringing the remains from the car to the hearse was solemn and imposing, the utmost quiet pervading the immense concourse of spectators, estimated at from five to ten thousand. On the remains being placed in the hearse, the corps of cadets wheeled into column of companies, preceding the hearse to solemn tappings of muffled drums. The escort then slowly took up the march on either side. Flanking the hearse was a delegation of twelve marines, while behind came the officers of the 5th Maryland regiment, who wore crape on their left arms. Following came eleven carriages with gentlemen accompanying the remains, the rear being brought up by a squad of police. The escort moved at 10.15 A. M. to Doric [illegible] be laid in state. There was a long line of march. The utmost quiet and reverence was shown to the deceased by the immense throngs that lined the streets, while the solemnity of the occasion was increased by the tolling of bells, continuing until the remains reached the State house. Doric hall was heavily but simply draped in black and white; the base of each of the two rows of columns in the center of the hall were trimmed in black, while the capitals were festooned in black and white, tastefully blended. The walls under the ceiling were also heavily bordered in the same manner. A brass awning in the rear center of the hall was ornamented by flags entwined with crape and resting in heavy black drapery. Under the clock and beneath the field pieces a monogram of the Vice President was represented in black lines and a silver vase of large dimensions. The decorations, though marked, were unpretentious, according fully with the simplicity of the deceased. Before the procession reached [illegible] four or five thousand persons had assembled. The space in front had been stepped off, and details of police kept the entrance open for the [illegible]. Hardly a sound of conversation could be heard, each and all of the vast crowd seeming to be inspired with a feeling of solemnity befitting the occasion and the day. Shortly after the arrival of the funeral cortege Gov. Gaston, with his staff and executive council, ex-Gov Claflin and others, descended from the executive chamber and took stations uncovered at the head of the dais which was prepared for the reception of the casket. Every whisper was hushed, and the silence seemed to add to the solemnity as the first melancholy note of dirge broke on the ear. When the procession reached the State House the casket was borne by eight police dressed in uniform up the steps leading from Beacon street to the main entrance, followed by a detachment of marines with reversed arms as a guard of honor, entering Doric Hall on the entrance floor. The [illegible] of the state officials and others uncovered. The casket was placed upon the dais, where it will remain until to-morrow, when the public funeral will take place.

Delivery of the Remains to the State Officials.

Immediately Col Wyman, of the Governor's staff, under whose charge the body was brought from Washington, and who with Col Campbell accompanied them as they were brought into the hall, stepped forward and saluted his commander-in-chief, made formal delivery of the remains to the State officials, and said:

"Your Excellency: In obedience to your orders we have proceeded to Washington and received from the National Committee the remains of Vice President Wilson, which we have escorted to Massachusetts and now deliver to you."

Gov. Gaston replied: "Massachusetts receives from you her illustrious dead. She will see to it that he whose dead body you have borne to us, but whose spirit has gone to higher service, shall receive honors befitting the great office which in life he held. I need not remind you that her people will ever treasure with love and respect the memory of her distinguished statesman, and not only guard and protect the body [illegible] but will also venerate his name and his fame. Gentlemen, for this pious service which you have so well and so tenderly rendered I accept the thanks of the commonwealth."

Lying in State.

Soon after the Governor and retinue retired, [illegible] also Mayor Cobb and the committee of the city government which met the remains at the depot. Before the casket was uncovered so as to permit a view of the remains, it was almost embowered with flowers. At the head was a large cross and crown, and at the foot an anchor, both designs being exquisite in their combination of rare and beautiful flowers. On the coffin was another large cross, variegated in color, and a harp composed of white tuberoses and other white flowers, while upon and around the casket were crosses, bouquets, etc., in profusion. The marines under Capt Haycock remained on duty with the body as guard of honor until deposited in the final resting place at Natick. As soon as the necessary preliminaries were finished the top of the casket was removed to allow an opportunity of viewing the remains. The first to look upon the face of the dead was His Excellency Gov Gaston, his staff and executive council, Mr Claflin, Messrs [illegible], Douglass, Wormley and [illegible] of Washington, ex-Gov Claflin and others. The doors were soon after opened to all of the waiting throng [illegible]. These were allowed to pass the ropes in squads of twenty or thirty, coming in [illegible] into Doric Hall, in the center of which was the dais. All through the day [illegible]

A large crowd having assembled in front of the State house, the doors of the hall were opened this evening, and for three hours a continuous stream [illegible] passed through to look on the remains of the Vice President. It is estimated that [illegible] people viewed them [illegible] A. M.

SOUTHERN PACIFIC.

Resolutions Adopted by the St. Louis Railway Convention.

ST LOUIS, Nov 26.—The committee on resolutions made the following report:

This convention of delegates, duly appointed from [illegible] States and Territories and many cities and boards of trade, merchants' exchanges and other commercial bodies, constituting a body of 869 delegates, representing not only a large proportion of the people of the United States, but of the active producing business capital of the country, and now assembled to take action upon the construction of the southern line of railroad to the Pacific, do most respectfully represent to the senate and house of representatives of the United States in Congress assembled, that the southern transcontinental railway from the waters of the Mississippi via El Paso to the Pacific ocean near the 32d parallel of latitude is imperatively demanded:

1. As a measure of sound statesmanship, because it is only by constant intercourse, business and social, that the great States now growing up upon the Pacific Slope can be permanently bound in common interest with the Eastern and Southern communities, and it is therefore sound policy and wise foresight to promote the most intimate relation between all sections of our common country, a necessity already recognized by government in its grant of bonds and lands to the Union and Central and Kansas Pacific roads, and of lands to other transcontinental roads of the [illegible] and 47th parallels, under the belief that private capital would furnish the needful funds to construct these highways; but owing to great commercial depression they cannot be built by individual capital, and the responsibility still rests upon government to secure the completion of at least one additional transcontinental line.

2. As a means of national defense, because it is the duty of government to have a line to the Pacific unobstructed at all seasons of the year for the prompt transportation of troops and supplies should trouble arise with any foreign country, and the forts and the countries of the Pacific would be exposed to insult or attack; such line to be sufficiently removed from our border to enable it to be fully protected against movements of hostile forces.

3. As a local military necessity, because the experience of the nation on the Central, Union and Kansas Pacific roads has proven that rail and telegraph, and facilities thereby provided, furnish the only sure means of intercepting and punishing the hostile Indians, and unmistakably indicate the adoption of the same method to prevent constant depredations in Western Texas, New Mexico and Arizona, make life and property secure and establish there the same law and order that prevail along the present Pacific line.

4. As a measure of practical economy, because, as already shown by the experience of the Pacific road, the expense of maintaining a military establishment for the protection of southern territory against Indian depredations will be largely reduced by enabling the government to transport troops and supplies at one fifth of the present cost; by enabling it to dispense with two thirds of the present force through the facilities offered for transportation and movements of troops, and thereby save from $8,000,000 to $10,000,000 per annum, and at the same time provide more efficiently and economically for the care and maintenance of Indian tribes under the espionage of the government.

5. As a commercial necessity to 12,000,000 people inhabiting the belt of country from 400 to 700 miles in width and stretching along the entire Southern Atlantic coast, Gulf of Mexico and Old Mexico to the Pacific ocean, who by reason of their geographical position cannot share in the benefits conferred by the present Pacific line.

6. It is a direct saving to the people of the country, because it will give a competing line between the two oceans, both for a large local and through traffic of this country, and for a great through traffic with the Sandwich Islands, India, China, Japan, Australia and Western South America, thereby conferring substantial benefit upon the entire nation, and because in this manner the people of the United States will best be protected against monopoly, to whom they have loaned $55,000,000 of 6 per cent government bonds and made large grants of lands to build the present Pacific railroad line, and for whose benefit the government is now paying yearly upwards of $3,000,000 additional out of the treasury, a corporation that has established arbitrary rates for transportation and is now seeking to perpetuate itself as a close corporation and control lines and such as it may hereafter build in its own exclusive interest, instead of [illegible] the country have a right to demand.

7. Because communication thus established with the rich and productive States of Old Mexico would secure a large and lucrative traffic now diverted to other countries, and would thereby increase the revenues of the government, while at the same time the connections with lines now projected from the capital of Mexico to its northern border would stimulate and develop this trade and enrich the citizens of our country by the exchange of our manufactured goods for the products of her soil and mines.

8. Because it is the duty of the government to protect the citizens whose guardianship it assumes under treaty obligations in the acquisition of Mexican territory in which they were resident, and also all citizens who have been induced by grants made by the government to aid the building of railways to settle in territories which those roads were intended to develop.

9. As a just, national and proper act to encourage the people of the south, who may very justly and with great force urge that while $175,000,000 of public money has been appropriated in Northern States and territories since the organization of the government, there have been but $19,000,000 expended in Southern States and Territories; because not only does the road, as a means of national defense, strengthen the military arm of the government and guarantee at all times the perfect security of the Pacific coast from attack by foreign powers, reduce expenses of its local administration, bind our country more closely together, facilitate communication with the Pacific and with Old Mexico, develop new traffic and the agricultural products and great mineral wealth of Texas, New Mexico and Arizona, but will also, by the demand for manufactures and production of every description, including iron, steel, cotton, wool, timber and other material needed in the construction of engines, cars, bridges, machinery, buildings, etc., for the use of the road, and by laborers employed in building and maintaining the same, give employment to furnaces, mills and machine shops of the country, and once more revive and stimulate the depressed industries of all sections; and whereas, to secure to the government and the people these several advantages, and in addition thereto secure the return to the people of thirty millions of acres of land heretofore granted to build the 32d parallel line, and save the building of 1,500 miles of road, it is the judgment of this convention not only right but the duty of the national government to render such aid, properly secured, restricted and guarded, as will secure the prompt completion of the line referred to, and such extensions as will give to all sections the advantages resulting therefrom. Now be it

Resolved, 1. That a southern line to the Pacific ocean should be built on or near the 32d parallel from Shreveport via El Paso to San Diego, where it will make connection with the waters of the Pacific ocean in a safe and excellent harbor, and connect with railway lines now building from San Francisco to the southern part of California, thus securing continuous lines to that great city and port.

2. That there should be constructed extensions from the most eligible points of the Texas and Pacific road to New Orleans, Memphis and Vicksburg, and from a point near the 100th meridian to [illegible] the Mississippi river, to connect with every road and roads of the Atlantic coast and with every railway east of the Rocky Mountains.

3. That to insure the nation the greatest benefit from this line, and to prevent its being controlled in the interest of any one part or section of country, there [illegible] be established such regulations as will maintain the road from Shreveport to the Pacific as an open highway and as a competing line to all transcontinental railways, to be used on equal terms by all connecting roads which are now or may hereafter be built, similar regulations to be applied to branches receiving similar aid to the Texas and Pacific trunk line.

4. That such [illegible] be built at the lowest possible cash cost, [illegible] that the people shall be protected against unjust or oppressive charges, and shall be [illegible] in its use at the lowest possible rates required to protect the comparatively small capital actually expended on its construction, and which result can be greatly aided by its construction at this time, when material and labor can be secured at prices much below those that have prevailed for many years past, and that Congress shall at all times reserve the power to protect the people against speculation and oppression in the use of this national highway.

5. That the [illegible] of the main line should proceed under such regulations as will insure the construction of the road continuously from the eastern [illegible] point in Texas to San Diego in California [illegible] the extension of the line [illegible] from San Diego.

6. That the construction of such line and branches can be best secured by the extension of government aid to the line and branches [illegible] a guarantee [illegible] interest [illegible] a limited amount of 5 per cent [illegible] payable [illegible] years, that the entire liability assumed shall not [illegible] the actual cost of the line and such branches, such liability to be secured by first mortgage on all railway property and franchises of the company and upon lands granted by the United States, and any other aid by [illegible] the line and branches to meet interest maturing, until the bonds, while the road is in course of construction, to be met by a deposit in the United States Treasury of the one eighth of the whole authorized issue, and the sale of some of it if it becomes necessary, after applying all net earnings and proceeds of lands and the sums due for government transportation, mail and telegraphic service, to meet interest so maturing as aforesaid, so that there shall be no outlay by the government; these bonds to be issued only to the actual amount of cash expended on the road and branches, and upon the certificate of the sworn commissioners appointed by government to supervise the building of the line and branches, and their redemption at maturity to be assured to purchasers and holders by providing a sinking fund out of the resources of the road and branches, to be paid by the companies into the Treasury of the United States, of such amount as may be sufficient to discharge the entire bonded obligations of the companies on which the government has guaranteed the interest.

7. That the president of the convention be requested to prepare an address to the people of the United States embodying the views as set forth in the preamble and resolutions adopted by this convention, and that he be authorized to appoint a committee of thirteen, who, with the president of this convention, shall present engrossed copy of these proceedings of this convention, together with the address, to the President of the United States, presiding officer of the Senate and Speaker of the House of Representatives, and take such further action as may be deemed best to further the objects and purposes of this convention.

Other resolutions, providing that copies of these resolutions be furnished to governors of States, mayors of cities, and commercial and other bodies represented in convention, and that the secretary have the proceedings of the convention published in pamphlet form, were also adopted.

An amendment to the report, providing for a branch from some point on the Texas Pacific railroad to the gulf coast at Galveston or some other point, was offered and occasioned considerable debate, but it was finally rejected and the resolutions [illegible] adopted.

Brief and congratulatory speeches were then made by [illegible] of the convention, by Hon R. W. Thompson of Indiana, Gen Wm Preston of Kentucky and Judge Matthews, president, and the convention adjourned sine die.

ST LOUIS, Nov 26.—Judge Stanley Matthews, president of the railroad convention, has appointed the following gentlemen as a committee to prepare the address to congress provided for by resolutions adopted by the convention: Hon Jas O. Broadhead, Hon R. W. Thompson, Hon J. H. Kennard, Morton McMichael, Peter Cooper, Gen Jos R. Anderson, Col F. W. Johnson, D. Felsenheld, A. G. Cafton, H. H. Smith, Gen J. E. Johnston, Georgia, C. K. Marshall. Judge Matthews is also a member of the committee in accordance with a provision of the resolution.

ST LOUIS, Nov 26.—The members of the committee appointed by President Matthews, of the National Railroad Convention, to draft a memorial to Congress for aid in the construction of the Texas Pacific railroad, still remaining in this city, met at the Southern Hotel to-day and elected James A. Broadhead chairman and Judge Kennard secretary. Resolutions were adopted requesting the chairman to obtain proof sheets of the address to the people of the United States to be prepared by President Matthews, and to forward them to members of the committee for information and comment; and authorizing the chairman to convene the committee at his discretion, three members to form a quorum at any such meeting; requesting the chairman to appoint a sub-committee, of which he shall be a member, to appear at their discretion before the proper committee of the Senate and House to explain and advocate the measures adopted; authorizing the chairman of the committee to add the names of each member of the committee to the address of President Matthews when completed. The committee adjourned, subject to the call of the chairman.

Burglary in an Epidemic Form—Caught at Last.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov 27.—During the last month the papers have been [illegible] with the account of burglaries, all of which seemed to be the work of the same parties from the similarity of proceedings in each. In every instance depredations were [illegible] on first class residences, some of the most prominent citizens being sufferers. The burglars seemed to have confined their [illegible] almost exclusively to [illegible] valuable cutlery, silverware and [illegible]. The uniformity and frequency of the robberies caused the police authorities [illegible] special officers to work up matters, which resulted in the capture, Tuesday evening last, of two men at the corner of Pine and Leavenworth streets, named Robt Schacht and [illegible] Root. The latter attempted to escape when ordered to give himself up, but was [illegible] rear of the premises. The men were locked up, and for several days past have been undergoing searching examination at the hands of Capt Lees, of the detective force, which has resulted in the discovery of their plunder, the greater portion of which it is believed has been recovered. It is composed principally of silver ware, sufficient to [illegible] fill a large chest, most of which has been identified as the proceeds of 23 burglaries committed between October 20th and November 23d. The value of this property is [illegible] not less than $7,500. It was recovered at various places in the city, where it had been pawned, sold or stowed away for safe keeping.

In addition there is a considerable quantity of similar property for which no owners have yet been found. Root appears to have been a veteran burglar and the leading [illegible] in these enterprises. He was arrested last September on a charge of having burglars' tools in his possession, and received a sentence of 30 days in the county jail for that offense. No intent was shown at that time to make felonious use of the tools. An appeal was taken from the decision of the police court, which was, however, affirmed by the higher tribunal. Schacht seems to have been merely the assistant of Root and [illegible] the business. The whole proceeds of the work of these two men for the last month are probably not much short of $10,000.

Coroner Burney took charge of the remains and will hold an inquest to-morrow. Portions of the boiler were blown through the house of P. H. Medley, making a complete wreck of every [illegible]. Mrs Medley had a very narrow escape with her life. The debris fell all around her. She escaped with slight bruises. No other persons were hurt. The concussion broke the windows of most of the buildings in the vicinity. Other portions of the boiler were picked up hundreds of feet from the scene of the explosion. Leavenworth's loss is estimated at $5,000, Medley's about $1,000. Losses sustained by other parties about $200.

The Latest from the Scene of the Wreck.

PORT TOWNSEND, Nov 28.—Since my report of the search for the wreck of the Pacific on the cutter Wolcott, I have continued the search on the shore of Vancouver Island and have found portions of the steamer all along the beach from Cadboro Bay to Beechy Bay, but no bodies appear to have come on shore since that of Old Commissioner Sullivan was found by the Indians just inside of Race Rocks. The rudder of the Pacific came on shore in a perfect condition and is now secured above high water mark in the immediate vicinity. Large quantities of the deck staterooms, hurricane deck, etc., have drifted on shore. On Monday, the 22d, while at Victoria, I received intelligence of the finding of the body of Mr F. L. Hastings, of San Francisco, at Port Angeles, on the 22d, and on my arrival here I found the body of my friend had arrived here. To the indefatigable exertions of [illegible] Hector Webster I am indebted for aid in making my search and for the recovery of the remains. I find the body of Mr H. in a fair state of preservation, and have identified it beyond a doubt—his watch, jewelry, clothing, etc., being easily identified and leaving no question as to identity. So long a time having elapsed since the wreck, I think there is but little hope of recovering any additional bodies of victims of the disaster, or any further facts relating to the scene of the loss of so many lives that has spread so deep a gloom over the community and carried sadness and despair into so many families all over the land. MONDAY MORNING NOV 29 1875

THE CONDUCT OF CAPT SAWYER

Capt Sawyer mate of the ship Orpheus the vessel which collided with the Pacific called [illegible] yesterday and exhibited to us documents showing that the members of the Orpheus crew who made the affidavits heretofore published concerning the conduct of Capt Sawyer at the time of the collision are not men whose word is entitled to the most implicit trust It will be remembered their statements were that Captain Sawyer, though his attention was called to the condition of the Pacific's passengers and though it was in his power to render assistance, declined to succor the drowning people dismissing a request for assistance with a profane oath That was a story to excite the indignation of every true heart But now Capt Sawyer produces a statement signed by these self same persons (and several others) and acknowledged before a notary, which contradicts that statement in toto, explicitly stating that immediately after the collision the two vessels drifted apart and there was nothing more seen by the Orpheus of the Pacific, and that in the position of affairs on the Orpheus, caused by the collision, it would have been impossible for Capt Sawyer to render immediate assistance, even had he supposed the steamer to have received any damage which he did not suppose so light was the blow It appears that the stewardess to whom reference was made by the affiants to confirm their statements against Capt. Sawyer, instead of confirming those statements, pronounces them unqualifiedly false so far as her knowledge goes So the affiants seem not only to have proved themselves unworthy of belief, by making contradictory statements in the most solemn manner, but find themselves also met by an open and apparently honest repudiation of their whole story by the witness to whom they referred to establish its truth

THE ADVANTAGE OF NOT KNOWING

If ignorance is not bliss it certainly is a very convenient thing sometimes Look for instance at the testimony of Mr Goodhue, agent of the O S S Co who testified before the coroner's inquest, at Victoria, in the Pacific's case We do not know upon what view of the case it was pertinent to ask Mr Goodhue the age of the several steamers of the Company he represents but somehow it was deemed pertinent and the question was put at him. He could not tell, did not know really had no very definite idea how old the Ajax and Stephens were; thought perhaps the Stephens might be about fifteen years old Now we do not wish to be understood as intimating, even in the most remote way that Mr Goodhue was ignorant on these subjects, because ignorance was very convenient under the circumstances, but we merely refer to the case as an illustration of the truth of the remark made at the outset, that ignorance is convenient sometimes. The John L [illegible] twenty-three years old, which, for aught we know, is just the prime of her life but to the general public fifteen sounds a good deal better than twenty three, as applied to the age of a passenger vessel Whether a vessel twenty-three years old is to be considered too old for safety, depends, we take it, very much upon the material of which she is built, but certainly a steamer only fifteen years in service would be entitled to the benefit of presumptions that could hardly be claimed for the same vessel eight years later The Ajax is a comparatively new vessel, being only eleven years old so we fail to see the point of advantage in the witness' ignorance with respect to her age

THE CHARGE AGAINST SECRETARY BRISTOW

The attempt to connect the name of Secretary Bristow with the whisky ring fails as ignominiously as the charge made a short time since that he was guilty of smuggling goods through the New York custom house The prompt demand of the Secretary that the matter be pushed in the courts, regardless of whether such action result in damage to himself or to any subordinate in the Department over which he presides, so unlike the equivocal and shuffling language which guilty men employ when confronted with truthful accusations is of itself such evidence of the falsity of the charge as would require the most direct and positive testimony of credible witnesses to overcome it But the lying statement of the fellow who set the report on foot is contradicted in advance by the President of the establishment in which the Secretary was alleged to be interested Such slanderous fabrications, thus early exposed, will but react to the injury of the ring in whose interest they are set on foot. The confidence of the country in Gen Bristow was strengthened by the miserable failure of the effort to involve his name in the custom house frauds of New York and this shameless attempt of the whisky ring will have the same effect

NATIONAL BANKS AND THE USURY LAW

According to a recent decision of the Supreme Court of the United States National Banks may take a greater rate of interest than that allowed by a State law without forfeiting the principal loaned It had formerly been held that the taking of excessive interest forfeited principal as well as interest The decision of the court was upon the following facts. The F & M National Bank of Buffalo, discounted a note for $2,000—at the rate of 10 per cent per annum—the legal rate of interest being 7 per cent per annum The maker of the note failed to pay the note when it became due and the bank sued him He answered that the agreement touching the discount was usurious corrupt and illegal that it avoided the note, and that he was in no wise liable to the plaintiff The State Circuit Court sustained this defense and gave judgment for the defendant The matter finally came up before the Supreme Court of the United States

The 30th section of the National Bank act of Congress of June 3d 1864 applies to this case It provides

That every association may take receive, reserve and charge on any loan or discount made or upon any note bill of exchange or other evidence of debt interest at the rate allowed by the laws of the State or Territory where the bank is located and no more except that where by the laws of any State a different rate is limited for banks of issue organized under State laws, the rates so limited shall be allowed for associations organized in any such State under this act And when no rate is fixed by the laws of the State or Territory the bank may take receive or charge a rate not exceeding seven per centum and such interest may be taken in advance reckoning the days for which the note bill or other evidence of debt has to run And the knowingly taking receiving reserving or charging a rate of interest greater than aforesaid shall be held and adjudged a forfeiture of the entire interest which the note bill or other evidence of debt carries with it or which has been agreed to be paid thereon And in case a greater rate of interest has been paid the person or persons paying the same or their legal representatives may recover back in any action of debt twice the amount of interest thus paid from the association taking or receiving the same provided that such action is commenced within two years from the time the usurious transaction occurred But the purchase discount or sale of a bona fide bill of exchange, payable at another place than the place of such purchase discount, or sale at no more than the current rate of exchange for sight drafts in addition to the interest shall not be considered as taking or receiving a greater rate of interest

The court said these clauses examined by their own light seem to us too clear to admit of any doubt as to anything to which they relate'

It was contended that the phrase a rate of interest greater than the aforesaid' as it stands in the context referred only to [illegible] to banks in States where no rate of interest is fixed by law and that hence it leaves the consequences of usury where such rate is fixed to be governed wholly by the local law upon the subject This in Oregon would forfeit the principal to the School Fund In Pennsylvania only the unlawful excess of interest and in Maryland the whole of both principal and interest would be forfeited

The court say, "Why such discrimination? It would be contrary to reason and justice that, under a contract precisely the same, the bank should in one State lose the whole of the debt and in another only a part of it

The law of June 3d 1864 is as much a part of the law of each State and as binding upon it and its people as its own local enactments It cannot be supplemented or altered by State legislation In no view which can be taken of the 30th Sec of the National Bank act is the power to supplement or alter granted There is reason why State laws should fix rates of interest but none why usury should be variously punished The Court finally determined that

Upon reason and authority we have no hesitation in coming to the conclusion that there is error in the case before us The plaintiff below was entitled to recover the principal of the note sued upon less the amount of the interest unlawfully reserved Whether he was entitled to recover interest upon the amount of the principal so reduced after the maturity of the note is a point which has not been argued and upon which we express no opinion The judgment of the Court of Appeals is reversed and the case will be remanded with directions to proceed in conformity with this opinion

Secretary Chandler is clearing out the Indian Bureau that is dismissing a large number of head clerks and others occupying positions [illegible] nounced that all these removals are for cause'—a phrase of settled definition signifying personal or official misconduct as contradistinguished from mere political preference If it is true that all these removals are for cause the worst that has been said of the corruptions in the Indian Bureau by the worst of its critics is fully justified If so many and so important officers of the bureau are found unworthy there is little room for anything more unless we say the whole organization and every part of it was honeycombed with corruption

SAFES

VIRGINIA CITY

FIRE.

We have received the following Letters from our customers in Virginia City.

Virginia City, Nev , Oct. 29, 1875.

Hall's Safe and Lock Co., San Francisco.

Our Safe purchased of you some two years since, brought our papers out in good condition, and Lock Worked all right.

Will see your Agent in regard to a new Safe. Respectfully,

WEBB & MULLARD.

Office L P Drexler & Co., Stock Brokers,

Virginia City, Nov. 1, 1875.

Hall's Safe and Lock Co,

Gentlemen—I had in my house during the late disastrous conflagration. on 26th ultimo, one of your Fire and Burglar Proof Safes (No. 21) in which were my private papers, silverware and diamonds, all of which came out in good condition, I had no difficulty in turning on the combination and opening both doors, without damage to them or Locks. The superiority of Hall's Safes for Fires, and Burglars, is in my opinion, without a rival. Yours, truly,

P. F. BEARDSLEY.

Virginia City, Nev., Oct. 29, 1875.

Hall's Safe and Lock Co.

Gents: — It affords me pleasure to be able to write you that the Fire and Burglar Proof Safe (No. 26) we purchased of you some time since, has stood the late severe test in a very satisfactory manner.

We had in Safe, at the time of the fire, some $10,000 and over $500 in gold notes, all of which came out in perfect order, also all books, warrants, etc.

The Locks opened on the combinations without any trouble, and Safe appears uninjured.

Our County Clerk's Vaults also preserved contents all O K.

Hall Safe and Lock Co.

Gents: -I had one of your single door (No. 4) Fire Proof Safes during the disastrous fire of the 26th, and I was unable to get at it to open it until to-day, on account of the great heat and rubbish around it. It was in the second story of a three-story brick building, and was exposed to the heat OVER SEVENTY HOURS. On opening, I found my books all legible and my insurance policies as bright as when put in the Safe, and the Lock worked all right.

You will send me immediately another Safe, the same size, and I cheerfully recommend the Hall's Safe

Very respectfully,

M. ASCHEIM.

Virginia City, Nev., Oct. 29, 1875.

Gents —I take pleasure in informing you that the Safe purchased of you about a year since preserved my books and papers

I will want a larger Safe as soon as I get Located. Yours respectfully,

MONDAY MORNING NOV 29, 1875

CITY.

Later from the Wreck.—The name of the schooner the hull of which lies stranded north of Cape Hancock, has been heretofore published incorrectly Instead of being the Sunbeam it is the Sunshine From the Astorian it is learned that Capt J A Richard son returned from the wreck on Thursday Capt Hilliar Mr Richardson Mr Lowe and others succeeded in getting to the wreck on Wednesday afternoon and cut into the hull in order to save the freight if possible The hatches were found to have gone off and the only freight remaining was about 40 or 50 tons of what appeared to be new rigging etc for a vessel which is now on the blocks at Coos Bay Trunks were found containing female and child's apparel which leads to the supposition that Capt Bennett was accompanied by his family Mr Richardson informs us that the wreck lies in good condition to be got off if the proper appliances were at hand She is held by her own anchors, bow on to the sea and floats at high tide The cabin was broken off when she struck on Tuesday and the masts are gone clean with the deck The vessel is said to be a beautiful model, and as she cost $ 8 000 it seems to us that something ought to be done to get her into port if possible

Man Proposes God Disposes — A short time since, it will be remembered Rev H S Parkhurst president of a colony of Pennsylvania immigrants, was here looking for land A part of the colony arrived a few weeks ago and immediately proceeded to Hood river where the colony lands are located During the trip by the railroad to California Mr Parkhurst was taken ill, and he, with his family, stopped over at Ogden and by the steamship Ajax, which reached here Saturday night, there arrived the widow of Rev Mr Parkhurst accompanied by three children He died a few weeks ago at Ogden, where he was taken sick Mr Parkhurst was greatly beloved by the members of the colony, and his unexpected death will prove a severe stroke to the enterprise The grief stricken widow and father less children have the kindest sympathies of the community in their sore bereavement. We understand, Mrs. Parkhurst proposes to take up a permanent residence in this State

Charity Fair.—This evening the fair in aid of St. Vincent's hospital, a worthy institution, will commence in the building No 80 First street nearly opposite the National Bank Those in charge have been untiring in their efforts to render the opening successful In every particular The location is central and as the attractions are great a successful season may be anticipated. Open your purse and set aside a portion for use to night at the charity fair Music will be provided, and all will go "merry as a marriage bell" The ladies will be there to wait upon visitors and their sweet smiles will prove a powerful inducement to hold attention.

Entertainment —This evening an entertainment musical and literary —will be given at Oregon City by a number of well known persons, Miss Rosa Miller late of the Boston Conservatory of Music and her sister have kindly volunteered and will appear on the occasion From this city a number of amateurs will appear prominent among whom we mention George L DeProns the Arion Quartette Club Mr Charles Ray McLowe, and other Miss Imogene Holbrook, the splendid elocutionist, will appear by special request and favor the audience with a few recitations

Death of Mr. Cradlebaugh —After a painful and protracted illness Mr G W Cradlebaugh departed this life at St Vincent's Hospital last Thursday morning and was buried Friday afternoon The funeral exercises took place at Taylor street M E church from whence the remains were taken to Lone Fir Cemetery followed by a number of friends of the deceased Mr Cradlebaugh was a graduate of West Point, a gentleman of high culture and a competent civil engineer He was employed for some time in Gen Michler's ...

Theatrical Company —Mr R C White who went to San Francisco a few weeks ago for the purpose of engaging a company, is on board the steamer which sailed for Portland yesterday. We are informed by Captain Conway that Mr White has secured a number of theatrical folks and that the company will leave for this city by steamer next Saturday Although the names of the company are not known yet, we are assured that Mr White has secured first class talent

A cordial invitation is extended to the public. In the evening a reception will be given to the friends of the society at which time the dedication ceremonies will take place to those who may be fortunate enough to receive an invitation, a very pleasant time can be anticipated

Yesterday afternoon Capt Sladen arrived at Wallula, and took passage on the steamer Owyhee, bound for Celilo Unless some unforeseen accident should occur his arrival in this city may be expected to-morrow or next day

SUICIDE OF JAMES IRVING.

Coroner J A Wetmore was notified Saturday evening about 11 o clock of the death of a man named James Irving, under circumstances which would lead to the belief that he had committed suicide Deceased was living at the house of Mr Thomas Irving his brother who resides near St. Vincent's hospital when the rash and fatal deed was committed Mr Wetmore deeming it impracticable to hold an inquest at that late hour deferred it until 9 o clock yesterday morning Summoning the required number of jurors the coroner repaired to the house at the appointed hour and proceeded to hold an inquest Dr W B Cardwell was called and made an examination of the body of deceased and also several witnesses were examined From the testimony of the brother and sister in law of deceased it seems evident that death was the necessary result of an overdose of opium Deceased came to Portland about eight months ago from England and soon after arriving here was employed at the soap factory of his brother Mr R Irving About two weeks ago a slight misunderstanding took place between the brothers when James left of his own accord However in a few days he came back and asked if he could go to work again Robert his brother told him certainly and James said he would commence on Monday, which would be to day Since he left work he has been very despondent and has been addicted to drinking occasionally He was seen alive and well for the last time Saturday evening about 7 o clock, just prior to retiring to his bed Irving was observed to have in his possession a small Chinese package of medicine and was asked by his sister in law what he was going to do with it He replied evasively saying he was restless at nights and that the medicine was a narcotic to soothe his nerves and make him sleep Mrs Irving thought he acted a little strange but gave the fact no thought at the time Soon after Irving went up stairs and retired to bed Between 9 o clock and 11 his brother desiring to see James went to his chamber door and knocked Receiving no response he called to him several times but failed to elicit an answer Thinking something was wrong he opened the door and entering the room was horrified to find his brother dead On a table which stood near the head of the bed, a box containing what proved to be opium was found lying with most of its contents gone From the appearance of the body it is supposed death ensued about 9 o clock Deceased was aged about 35 years and for a long time was a corporal in the English army He had in his possession two letters written by the officers of the company to which he belonged The letters state that the bearer is a sober, steady man and in every way worthy of esteem and confidence also that he was honorably discharged from the army in accordance with his own desire. After hearing all the evidence the jury returned the following

STEAMER GUSSIE TELFAIR SUNK.

Saturday morning the unwelcome intelligence was received here to the effect that the steamer Gussie Telfair had struck a rock while descending the Columbia and sunk At first it was hoped that the news was premature, but it was speedily confirmed by a dispatch sent from Kalama of the same import The steamer Gussie Telfair sailed from here Friday afternoon bound for Victoria and intermediate ports carrying a few passengers and about 125 tons of assorted cargo About 11 o clock Friday evening the accident occurred Quite early in the evening a heavy fog gathered over the bottom of the river which was so dense that the pilot Mr Irving Stevens was compelled to run with extreme caution When near Happy's Fishery about 25 miles above Astoria, the fog became so extremely thick that it was deemed a prudent measure to come to anchor and wait for daylight The pilot gave the engineer orders to stop the machinery and also at the same time instructed the quartermaster to put the vessel on her course This was for the purpose of allowing the anchor to be heaved Both orders were obeyed and the steamer continued to drift forward Just below the fishery a sharp point of rocks extends abruptly out into the stream Through the thick fog bank it was impossible to see the ledge of rock Mr Stevens was aware of the existence of these rocks, and his object in ordering the quartermaster to put her on her course was to steer clear of the point The order must have been misunderstood by the man at the wheel for a few moments after the instructions were given to put the vessel on her course, and while preparations were being made to heave anchor she struck the point of rock A hole was stove in the forward part of the hull through which the water rushed in large quantities soon filling the compartment in that portion of the vessel after sinking the tide and current caused the steamer to swing around, bringing the stern against the sharp rocks Although she did not swing very rapidly the violence of the blow was sufficient to start the seams where the plates were riveted and caused the vessel to spring a leak When it was discovered that the steamer was in a sinking condition orders were given to head her for the shore, which fortunately was only a short distance away and the steamer was successfully beached in a little cove between the fishery buildings The water however was about 10 feet deep in the hold at low tide Early Saturday morning the steamer Fanny Hayward came alongside the partially sunken vessel and took off about 50 tons of freight which was not submerged Seventy five tons of freight at least is either badly damaged or rendered wholly worthless by the water The full measure of damages sustained has not been ascertained yet, owing to the position in which the steamer is lying However it is thought that the vessel can be got afloat by means of pumps and then towed to Astoria where she will be beached and have permanent repairs made Mr Wendler the agent on receipt of the news, proceeded by steamer to the scene of the disaster but finding he could be of no service for the present returned on the steamer Ajax Saturday night Mr Fox the engineer of the Telfair also came and proceeded early yesterday morning to Oregon City where he will procure several large syphon pumps The holes in the hull will be temporarily closed and with the aid of the pumps it is hoped the vessel can be cleared until she reaches Astoria A large quantity of flour and other freight of a perishable character was on board the most of which will prove a total loss to the company

PERILS OF THE SEA.

ANOTHER VESSEL SWAMPED—ONLY ONE PERSON SAVED—WASHED ASHORE BY THE BREAKERS

GARDINER Ogn, Nov 23 1875

To the Editor of the Oregonian

Last night a man by the name of Daniel Deary of the bark Florence bound for San Francisco from Port Discovery loaded with three hundred thousand feet of lumber consigned to Mastick & Co brought the following sad particulars of the vessel and all the crew but himself On Tuesday, Nov 16, at 3 A M a heavy southeast gale sprung up and continued to increase until 8 o clock P M At 8 o clock A M (Tuesday) the vessel was found to be leaking badly All hands went to the pumps but could not get a suck At 10 A M the mate requested the captain to throw the deck load overboard to save the ship, but he said he would wait until the afternoon as the glass showed that the gale would not last much longer He therefore let the load remain until 1 P M when he gave orders to throw it off half the crew working at the load and half at the pumps They threw off about 25,000 before darkness set in and then all hands went to the pumps But the water gradually gained on them and at 6 30 P M they found they had about 9 feet of water in the hold They worked hard pumping until 8 P M when the captain told them that the gale was over At 2 o clock A M Wednesday, Mr Deary asked the captain if there was any danger of her breaking up or sinking as it was reported that she had 100 tons of ballast aboard and the answer that he gave was that he did not know At 3 A M he gave orders to get the boat ready as the vessel was evidently sinking The crew went to work to launch the boat and with great difficulty succeeded The sea was breaking over her so that it was impossible to do anything forward of the main mast The captain with his nautical instruments was the last to leave the vessel They pulled away towards the land, it being as the captain supposed about 40 or 50 miles distant At 3 P M Wednesday they sighted land, but the sea being too rough they put out to sea again Thursday morning they went close in but did not dare to try it About 2 o clock in the afternoon the crew requested the captain to land as they had no water or provisions and were very much fatigued being wet since Tuesday morning The captain said it was impossible to make a landing, but if they would take their chances he would take his, and they steered for the breakers. When they had fairly got into them a breaker struck the boat and capsized her and all the men, as far as Deary can recollect, were thrown from the boat He swam back to the boat and hung on to the painter and says that was all that saved him He recollects seeing the first and second mates and two seamen swimming and holding on to the captain's trunk but they were finally washed off, and that was the last he saw of them The captain and China cook went down as soon as the boat capsized He says that he was in the water nearly an hour. When he landed it seemed like a dream He stood up and let the breakers knock him ashore He finally regained his senses somewhat, and searched the beach to see if he could not find some of them which he continued to do until dark when he took what clothes were in the boat when she capsized that had washed ashore and made him a bed and stayed until morning and still nothing could be seen but the vessel, as it had come ashore sometime during the night everything gone but the mizzen mast He was picked up by the Indians of the Siuslaw reservation and kindly treated until he was able to ride to this place

The crew consisted of the following persons Captain, S A Dayton first mate — Anderson second mate — Carey seamen — Welch Malcom Grant William Duncan, — McPherson a Norwegian from Tacoma (name unknown), and a China cook

The vessel foundered about 40 or 50 miles off the Umpqua bar and drifted 25 miles to the northard to about the same place where the brig Fawn went on the beach several years ago

Several persons went to search for the bodies this morning and intend to remain several days Will let you know what success they have next week LANGLEY HALL, JR

In monetary circles we still hear an occasional murmur about the closeness of the market and the [illegible] of the supply for speculative purposes, but on the whole there is a fair degree of ease and a general feeling that no cause exists to fear any serious pressure during the season The tendency of things in business circles now seems to be toward a more relaxed state of finances and though the active period in the season except in the line of domestic produce trade and shipments may be said to have past the movement of grain and other products bids fair to aggregate very largely during the winter months

The general merchandise market is quiet at this time and most of the business done is in the way of orders to fill broken stocks

The leading articles of domestic produce in the local market show no important fluctuations since our last quotations The receipts of wheat by rail have declined in volume Less of this cereal is also now being brought down the Columbia and the Yamhill rivers while the boats from the Upper Wallamet are still bringing forward large quantities.

The prospect for about a dozen vessels mostly of large carrying capacity arriving during December is good, and should the desired improvement in the market take place we might reasonably anticipate a very great reduction of the surplus wheat on hand by the first of [illegible] however both at home and abroad has a depressing tendency on transactions as holders and exporters do not view the future at all in the same light the former claiming that the close of shipments from Eastern ports of the United States and the stoppage of transportation from Russia by the annual ice blockade will so materially lessen the present receipts at English ports that prices must come up while shippers say the present reduction is not in all probability a temporary decline but is owing in a great measure to the monetary situation, the sharp advance in freights, and the improved prospect for the crop of 1876 The latter at least cannot be assigned as a reason with any degree of certainty as yet in any grain producing country with which we are acquainted as all calculations based on next year's crop at this particular season or date in the season are liable to be totally upset by the winter and spring weather Whatever high freights and the scarcity of money may have had to do in bringing about the present reduced rates the prospect of good or bad crops next year is too remote to have much weight now The acreage sown would be a much safer basis were that given in anything like an authentic manner

Shipping Intelligence

The steamship Ajax hence for San Francisco will sail to-morrow afternoon at 4 o'clock

The steamship Ajax from San Francisco with freight and passengers arrived at a late hour this evening

The Br ship British Statesman cleared from San Francisco for this port on the 18th

A San Francisco exchange of last week says Ship Dauntless 9⅛ tons wheat from Portland to Liverpool full rates schooner Wild Gazelle is announced to load for La Paz and Guaymas There are only eleven disengaged ships and barks in port available for the foreign trade but the engaged list is well filled and there is no pressing demand for vessels hence rates are nominal at 52s 6d to 5 s for wheat charters to England and other business in proportion There are 20 000 tons of tonnage now due and may safely be counted upon inside of two weeks

The Br bark Carn Tual hence with a wheat cargo arrived at Queenstown Nov 2
